

Southern Charms Etiquette Classes

Master Etiquette and Eloquence with the Dean of the Charleston Academy of Domestic Pursuits, Suzanne Pollak.

There is no 'one size fits all' etiquette plan for life. Every person, and each couple, requires a personalized approach, based on universal practices, cultural/regional differences, and family traditions. These private or group classes with the Dean will help participants determine how to represent themselves well, as individuals and in their partnerships.

Socializing

Learn the secrets of a social life ~ building block skills that take you from the first introduction to lifelong relationships. In this comprehensive two-hour session, we answer the questions the Dean is asked most frequently: about behavior, dress codes, impressions, verbal and non-verbal skills, gifts, and navigating cultures.

The Art of the Meal

Use your intuition, hands, sight, and taste; discovering the essential tools of elegant drinking and dining with three or three hundred people. Questions from A to Z will be covered: setting complicated tables; decorating plates, tables, rooms; who sits where; how to hold different wine glasses (even while eating finger food); helping guests know when it's time to leave. And if you've ever wondered about keeping romance alive, the most invaluable weapons in a host's arsenal will be revealed.

Marriage Boot Camp for Men

This is a workshop on everything domestic from folding clothes to making an omelette. We've compiled a list from young married women on what they wish their husbands knew! The biggest turn-on is the feeling that your partner has read your mind and can meet your needs without you even having to ask. At their best, clued-in husbands can be the key to navigating the complexities of married life and the key to success both in and out of the bedroom. This session will provide guidelines to survive the ups and downs of married life, for life.
